Dear Explorers,

I always welcome people's interest in our life as angel guardians, in particular of those of us who are shared by three people. We have very specific issues to deal with and we would benefit enormously from public awareness about them. Unfortunately, whomever posted this story decided to make up crucial facts to embellish the end. Far from the rosy conclusion that this story maker came up with, as Bohdan started to walk I felt pushed away with extraordinary acceleration, to the extent that I soon reached the edge of the Milky Way. I was not upset because I knew that in this case it was really a matter of absent mindedness on the part of Bohdan and Ashley, which is quite characteristic of them, I must say. As soon as I returned, and after I recovered from dizziness, I asked them to seat next to me to elucidate together what had happened: Ashley should have been the one walking towards the position that Bohdan ended up at. I hope that Amanda, Ashley, and Bohdan will learn to take care of their guardian angel (i.e. me), but I also hope that story makers will stop misleading the public for the sake of happy endings.

With Love
